Notable features:

Numbers 301 and 305 give some idea of the quality of the houses which stood where the low modern houses have been built. Both are stately buildings which make the modern houses look worse than they in fact are, and in reverse, are made to look ungainly by the squat proportions of the new houses. It is an unfortunate relationship which should be remedied in this case and never again repeated. Both the old houses are vacant and at least one of them, number 307, might well be demolished and another of the meager modern ones built. The corner, number 301, might suffer the same fate except for the corner-turning effect of the tiny houses which is too awful to contemplate.

Environmental context:

Numbers 301 and 305 are vacant. Street trees are needed. Though the visual environment has been violated, the living environment appears to be good, judging by the good maintenance and appearances.
